SUMMARY OF THE REASONS FOR DECISION:

The magazine entitled Young Girls Ecstasy 14 is classified as:
Objectionable.

The magazine, which is approximately 64 pages long, contains photographs and text that depict and describe sexual activity in an explicit manner. The focus of the publication is on sexual conduct between young females and older males. For example, throughout the magazine females are presented wearing the style of clothing that young teenage girls would wear. Accompanying text supports the focus of the photographs by using young persons identifiers. For example the text refers to 'the school choir' and the 'girls in my form'. The Classification Office finds that due to the combination of the title of this magazine, the subject matter of the photographs, the manner in which females are presented and the nature of the accompanying text, this magazine promotes and supports the exploitation of young persons for sexual purposes. Section 14 of the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act 1990 (NZBR Act 1990) does not apply to this magazine because it has been determined that the magazine has been classified under criteria in s3(2) of the Films, Videos, and Publications Classification Act 1993 (FVPC Act 1993). The provisions in s3(2) of the FVPC Act 1993 are deeming provisions which cannot be given a meaning consistent with s14 of the NZBR Act 1990.
